

BOARD & BREW

About the project:

Board & Brew is a brand identity case study for the anti-doomscroll café. We've all seen it: a room full of people, each locked into their own glowing screen, physically together but worlds apart. Board & Brew exists to break that spell pairing exceptional coffee and food with tabletop games that give people a reason to look up, lean in, and actually play.

Put your phone down, pick a game up.

LOGO BREAKDOWN:

A few friends gathered around a table, mid-game and mid-laugh. Coffee cups sit right alongside the pieces and cards, because in this world, coffee and connection share the same table. It's not just a logo. It's the brand's whole promise, illustrated.

There's also a wordmark version, "Board & Brew" set in Luckiest Guy, a bouncy, playful font that carries the same sense of fun and connection.

PROJECT OVERVIEW

Board & Brew is the anti-doomscroll café. It's a place where good food, great coffee, and real games bring people together for a genuinely good time

THE PROBLEM

The challenge was building a visual identity for a café built entirely around togetherness, not isolation. How do you make a brand look and feel like a place where people actually come together to play?

THE SOLUTION

The identity leans on pink, cream, and brown, paired with playful yet grounded. The imagery does the rest: food, board games mid-play, hands reaching across the table, and phones set aside, together capturing the coffee, the play, and the connection at the heart of the brand.

How do you build a visual identity for an anti-doomscroll board game café ?

The answer came through warm browns, creams, and playful pink. We paired this with DM Serif Display for headings and Lora for body text. The imagery tells the rest of the story. You see hands deep in a play for hours and Lora for body text. You see food arriving by cycle basket. You even see branded coffee bags doing their own quiet marketing. The brand also shows up everywhere else. This includes the Instagram grid, posts, and stories. It includes staff uniforms, loyalty cards, and billboards too. A few funky stickers are sprinkled throughout. They keep the identity feeling light and playful, never too polished. Together, all these pieces build one world. It is a place where good coffee, good food, and good company come first. A world where people look up a little more, and scroll a little less.
